

The 6 Day Average is as stated. It is the average number of Captures and Fragments from 5 days prior and including the date charted. Because of the major changes in a daily figure, a 6-Day average will display trends more reliably.

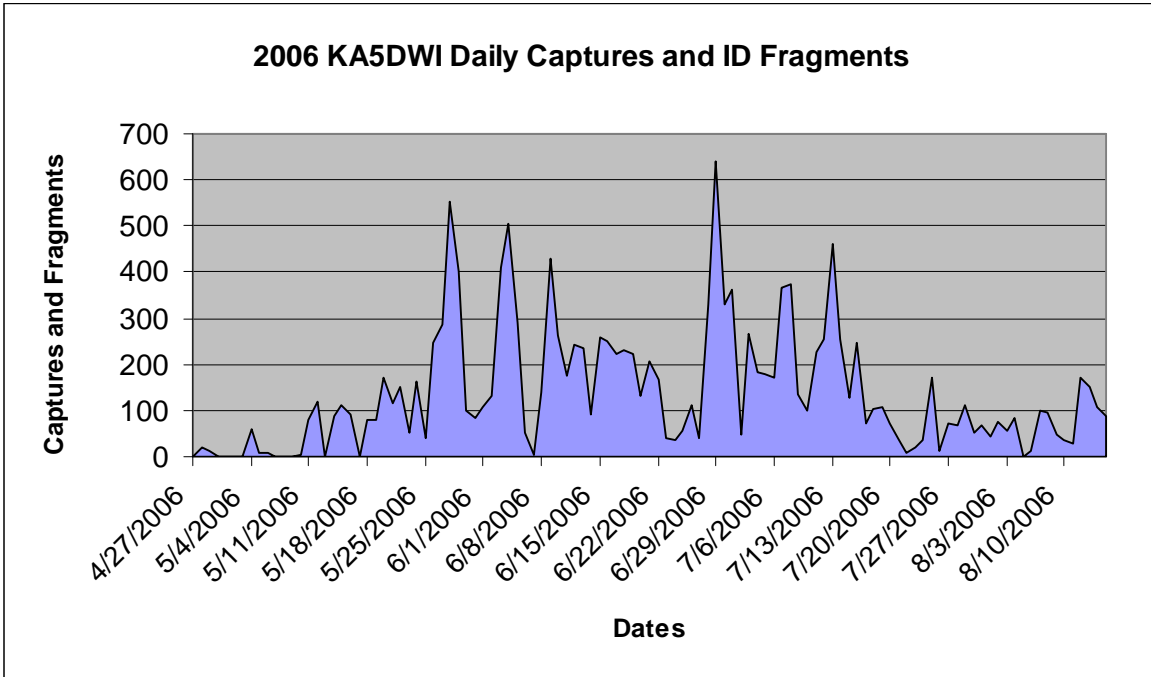

Note two (2) distinctive peaks this year with a more bell shaped curve towards the summer solstice.

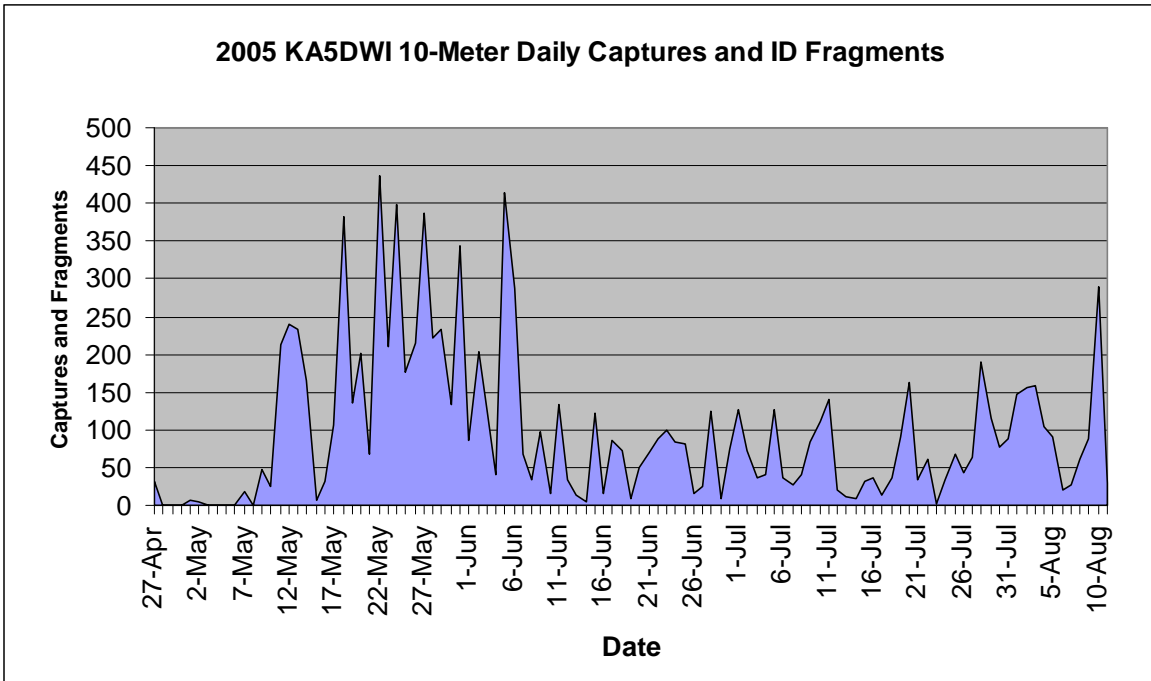

2005 had one early activity peak, followed by mediocre results with some improvement at the end of the season.

Fragment (Partial) data for 2006 has been scrubbed for unidentifiable postings. There are over 15,000 total postings for 2006, just under 10,000 for 2005.

Note that there were about as many large activity days (300+) in both years, it was just better spread out through the 2006 Es Season.

Thank you my fellow PropNetters.
